

HUNGARIAN BIO FOOD SELECTION

ORGANIC products

In Hungary about 65 % of the land is suitable for agricultural production, and three quarters of this area is arable land. There are suitable conditions for organic production. The use of GMOs is constitutionally banned in Hungary, and in many agricultural areas crops are produced without agro-chemicals. As a result, Hungarian ORGANIC products represent the highest quality, and, in addition to their popularity at home, they are widely acknowledged on the international market as well.

Thanks to the country's geographical location, Hungarian cereal, wheat and other finished products are of exceptional nutritional value and quality, which explains why they are so popular on the market. AND PROCESSED MEAT
FOOD SELECTION

HUNGARIAN GOURMET FOOD SELECTION

A gourmet selection of meats, cheeses, and breads on a wooden board. The board is filled with various types of cured meats, including salami and prosciutto, along with fresh basil leaves. In the background, there are several small round loaves of bread, some topped with white cheese and herbs, and a bunch of green grapes. The scene is set against a dark, rustic background with wooden pillars.

HUNGARIAN PRESERVED FOOD SELECTION

Preserved food

Vegetable and fruit varieties produced in Hungary are available to customers even when they are not in season, thanks to modern methods of conservation. Canned vegetables, spreads and tomato purées are excellent ingredients that may be used in many different ways. Jams, marmalades, fruit preserves and fruit sauces are important sources of vitamins, even in wintertime.
